

Arnold & Smith Law Firm Expands To Lake Norman

Charlotte practice aims to infuse new Mooresville office with hallmark tenacity, muscle

CHARLOTTE, NC — Traffic isn't usually credited with growing business. Quite the opposite, actually.

But for the lawyers at Charlotte's Arnold & Smith, PLLC, the worsening I-77 traffic between Charlotte and Lake Norman sparked an idea that has come to fruition. This month, the firm opened its second office at 219 Williamson Road, Suite 1101, in Mooresville.

"We have always had a very active practice in the Lake Norman area," says attorney Matthew R. Arnold, managing member. "We wanted to be able to better serve those clients. With the infrastructure challenges thrust upon that area, we figured if they can't come to us, we should go to them."

Arnold and his law partner J. Bradley Smith, both Charlotte natives, are familiar with the growth and struggles of the region. Arnold represents the Widen I-77 group in its opposition to the for-profit toll roads. Arnold & Smith, PLLC focuses on divorce and family law, criminal and traffic defense, personal injury and business/civil litigation.

The firm has tapped Mooresville attorney Ronnie Crisco to head up the new Lake Norman office.

"Ronnie is a brilliant, truly excellent lawyer," Arnold says. "He was Duke undergrad — I try not to hold it against him — and UNC law. He has deep roots in the Lake Norman area. He's a family man."

"He fights hard. In every way, he epitomizes the ideals of our law firm: excellent legal ability, high integrity, and the backbone to fight with everything he's got," Arnold says.

With the addition of Crisco, the team of 12 lawyers at Arnold & Smith, PLLC will include two Board Certified Specialists in family law.

"We are excited to bring our style of legal representation, which doesn't shy away from highly contentious matters, to folks throughout the Lake Norman community," Arnold says.
